DECIDE YOURSELF

The Opportunity Is Here, Backed by Barre Testimony.

Don't take our word for it. Don't depend on a stranger's statement. Read Barre endorsement.

Read the statements of Barre citizens. And decide for yourself.

Here is one case of it—

M. I. Spaulding, painter, 16 Seminary street, Barre, Vt., says: "I had more or less kidney trouble for four or five years and I think it was the result of the conditions to which I am subject at my work. At night my back ached terribly and I could not sleep well. There were dark spots before my eyes at times and too frequent passages of the kidney secretions plainly proved that my kidneys were at fault. The contents of two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at E. A. Drown's drug store, disposed of all these troubles, and I have only had to take this remedy once since then. At that time I found prompt relief from an attack of backache. I take pleasure at all times in vouching for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I gladly confirm the public statement I gave in their favor some three years ago."

Town superintendent of schools Casey is waiting for the completion of the Carleton tenement, near the Congregational church, which he expects to occupy.

Rev. D. H. Strong, who will start on his vacation trip next Monday morning will be absent from his pulpit two Sundays. Mrs. Strong will remain in the parsonage meantime.

At the Congregational church Sunday morning, the subject of the sermon will be, "The Light That Searches Within." This will be the pastor's last Sunday before vacation. Union service in the evening at the Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Enos F. Walker returned from Moline, Ill., on the early train Friday morning, safe and sound. As Mr. Walker was upwards of 80 years old, some of his friends thought it a good deal of a risk to make this trip, but he endured it well.

We wear nothing but regret expressed that William Wylie (on the old Edison S. Martin farm) has sold out here and will move to Barre City. It is told that he took a house on Hooker hill in the trade. Mr. Wylie's family have fled quite a large place in the social life of our place, and they will be sorely missed.

Funeral of A. D. Mears, Who Was Highly Esteemed by All.

The funeral of A. D. Mears took place from his late home Wednesday, the Universalist pastor from Rochester officiating. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends to show their sympathy for the bereaved family and their respect for the deceased. Mr. Mears had lived in town many years and was town clerk and treasurer. He was elected representative four years ago and, being a Democrat, shows the esteem in which he was held, as there are but few Democrats in this place. He was of a genial disposition and fond of telling stories to his ever-interested listeners. He left a wife and daughter and other relatives and many friends to mourn his loss. The interment was in the cemetery at Rochester.

Several from here attended the drama at Granville Friday evening.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Girl in the Taxi" at Opera House To-night.

"The Girl in the Taxi," a melange of melody, mirth and merry-making, comes to the opera house to-night, October 8. "The Girl in the Taxi" created a sensation alike in Berlin and Paris and upon its production in Chicago and Boston last season scored an unqualified triumph, remaining in each city for a run of six solid months. Public and press are unanimous in acclaiming this adaptation from the French the greatest laugh-producing entertainment ever presented in this country and the phenomenal success which has rewarded its production bears out this verdict. From curtain to curtain the merriment never ceases, except to permit of the introduction of refreshing musical and dancing specialties, which are seized by the audience as breathing spots in this marathon of mirth.

The American adaptation was made by Stanislaus Stange, an author as well known for his numerous successes on this side of the Atlantic as Anthony Mars, the German author, is on the other. The scenes are located in New York, but the piece still retains the flavor of the French locale. The plot of the play deals with the escapades of Mignon, the pretty, but coquettish, wife of a New Jersey perfume manufacturer. Mignon is fond of visiting New York and bathing in the fascinating lights of the great white way. She does so in this play to her heart's content. She meets an old friend from Philadelphia, who is forced to come to New York twice a year to see a physician on account of a throat trouble. This physician's practice lies chiefly among the chorus ladies of the metropolitan show, and the man from Philadelphia remains as long as his wife will let him. He introduced Mignon, who is "the girl in the taxi," to his cousin, young Bertie Stewart, who has "never been alone with a strange woman." Mignon, however, shows him the error of his ways, and they keep an appointment that night at the Cafe Riche. By a strange coincidence, Bertie's father shows up at the same cafe in company with two chorus girls. To push the coincidence further, Mignon's husband comes to the same place to get a bite to eat after bidding his wife good-bye and missing his train. Also, the man from Philadelphia turns up, no sicker than anyone else, and looking for a good time. The embarrassments accumulate thick and fast and culminate in the perfume man discovering that his wife is dining with young Bertie. The unexpected meeting of the father and son, as performed in "The Girl in the Taxi," is said to be the funniest situation ever devised and one calling forth the greatest burst of laughter and applause.

The first and third acts of "The Girl in the Taxi" occur in the beautifully appointed home of John Stewart on Riverside drive, New York, while the second act takes place in the private dining room at the Cafe Riche, modeled after New York's best known and most exclusive restaurant. The production is a costly one, but no detail has been overlooked. The cast engaged to present "The Girl in the Taxi" in this city is composed entirely of comedians and artists selected for their special fitness in the roles portrayed.

APPLE CROPS OF THE YEAR.

Showing Favorable in Many States, with Prospects of Good Prices.

The apple condition September 1, according to the government report, has fallen off about 1 per cent. from the preceding month and is now well below half a crop for the whole country, although still about 2 per cent. better than for the corresponding time last year. An average of this kind, however, is misleading, because it gives states of small production equal weight with those of large production, says the American Cultivator. The important thing to know is that the percentage falls off sharply in a state like New York, which is the chief shipper to the leading eastern markets like Boston and New York. New York reports only 40 per cent. of a crop, as compared with 48 per cent. last year and 59 per cent. for a 10-year average. The North Atlantic states taken together average about the same as last year, these including New England and Pennsylvania, as well as New York.

The best crop in this part of the country is reported in Vermont, 74 per cent. Other states of this section range between 31 and 66 per cent. The south Atlantic states are doing better than last year, averaging 72 per cent., compared with 47 per cent. last year, but none of these states are large shippers in competition with northern apples of the winter varieties. In the middle West the crop amounts to very little in a commercial way, the average for Ohio, Michigan and the prairie states being only 28.7 per cent., which is below the very small crop of last year. The Northwest reports scarcely more than one-third of a crop. The only first-class crop reported is in the far Northwest, including the Pacific coast, where the percentage reported is 81.4 per cent., which is well ahead of last year and of the 10-year average.

This showing is even more favorable than that of last month for the market price future. It is very plain that good eastern apples will bring good prices, as the only apples in competition will be those of the Pacific coast, which are in a class by themselves and not usually considered direct competitors, as they sell in a different package and to a different class of buyers. The more the percentage of the different sections is studied, the firmer appears the situation, and the better the justification for confidence on the part of orchardists in New York and the middle states. While the crop in these sections is not large, there are many orchards which have a good crop and the range of prices likely to prevail.

Apples are reported being sold around $2.50 to $3.25 for No. 1's at country shipping stations in the orchard sections, and it seems likely that at least this level will prevail. Many orchardists are holding for over $3 per barrel, but those accepting offers around this figure are taking a safer course, since it has often happened that the prices around the first part of the season are better than those prevailing a little later. But this year it is hard to see where apples enough could come from to break the market in any such way as occurred during the early part of last winter. Apples from the far West will be held at too high prices to cause such results, and no surplus apples could be expected from any other section. Apples at $3 a barrel look like a safe proposition for all concerned.

SELECTING SEED CORN

Before the Harvest is the Proper Time for Gathering.

"For seed purposes the ear corn should be selected from the stalk as it stands in the field after it has well matured and the husks have become entirely dry," states Prof. B. A. Moore of the university of Wisconsin in writing of the curing and testing of seed corn in a new circular, No. 18, just issued. "Carefully examine the stalks and reject those which are either very high or very low and avoid ears with unusually deformed stalks." The best way to select corn is to go down each row picking out the ears from the stalks that are unusually vigorous and show the desired characteristics. Put these ears in baskets at the side of the field, then husk and discard those that are not up to the standard. Only ears of the best form should be retained for seed purposes since a small amount well cared for is worth more than a large amount less thoroughly cured.

The corn should not be picked as early that it is immature, since its vitality is thereby injured. A slight frost will not injure the seed corn if it is well ripened, and it is better to risk a frost than to pick the ears too early. Corn should be placed upon racks so that it will cure out rapidly before cold weather begins and artificial heat should be used if necessary. Do not lay corn in the sunlight, as the sunshine injures the vitality of the seed. Corn should be stored in a dry room where it will not absorb moisture during damp weather. A little care given to the proper selection and testing of seed will mean an increase of several bushels per acre in the yield of the crop, with the result that the total corn production of Wisconsin will be increased several million bushels.

Politics and Cucumbers.

"And what," asked a visitor to the North Dakota state fair, "do you call that kind of a cucumber?" "That," replied the Fargo politician, "is the insurgent cucumber. It doesn't always agree with a party."—Everybody's Magazine.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla Purity

Why Is Your Neighbor Prosperous?

owns his own home with modern conveniences; and is getting ahead and enjoying life, while you live in an unsatisfactory rented house with few improvements, paying good money for rent each month and keeping about even?

A question worth the consideration of every thinking man and woman in Barre who is paying rent. The answer in nine cases out of ten is that your neighbor has made a start in some small way and you have not. He may have purchased a home on easy terms, paying monthly; or may have purchased a lot on easy terms and erected a house. Hundreds in Barre have started toward independence by first purchasing a lot with no idea of building but for the purpose of trading it in toward a home as first payment. This is being done not only in Barre but in every live city in New England.

Over one hundred lots have been sold in Barre this season. Most of them have been purchased by laboring men on easy terms. Isn't that a sign of prosperity? Are you going to share in it? If not, why not? A suggestion. Come with us on and watch us sell the remaining lots on this tract at auction. Every lot will be sold regardless of value—just what those present wish to pay. The chances are that you can make $50.00 or $100.00 buy from $200.00 to $400.00 in value. Easy terms—$5.00 down on a lot secures it. Balance so easy you do not miss it. Only five to eight minutes' walk from stone sheds, near electric cars. An absolutely safe investment. Put a few dollars in your purse and come. You won't be sorry. Fine music by Mr. Karl Forsell, the noted cornetist. Large list of beautiful presents to be distributed absolutely free. And in addition a desirable building lot is to be given away to the person holding the lucky number. It may be you. Lots adjoining the one we propose to give away sold at a previous sale for $100.00. This is equally desirable. Do not miss this sale. Your last chance. Saturday afternoon 2 o'clock until 5.

Your Prosperous Neighbor Will Be There.
